STROM AND ASSOCIATES DEFENDS NEW CLAIM AFTER ORIGINAL MEDICAL TREATMENT IS UNSUCCESSFUL IN REPAIRING WORKER'S INJURY

CHICAGO – While working at Outsourced Services, Marek Majchrowicz, 41, was injured operating a chain saw that during his use broke, severely and deeply cutting into his thigh just above the knee.

Majchrowicz was awarded medical care for his thigh injury which, after surgery and physical therapy, was eventually deemed at its maximum medical improvement.

“The problem was, Mr. Majchrowicz was still having problems with his knee even after having been given a clean bill of health,” explains Neal Strom of Strom and Associates. “At first after making an additional claim, Mr. Majchrowicz was denied help with medical care. That’s when we were able to help.”

Strom and Associates reviewed medical reports and contacted Majchrowicz’s doctors to determine the extent of the injuries to his knee. Eventually Strom and Associates deposed Majchrowicz’s doctors, proving he had remaining damage to his knee suffered as a result of the original chainsaw accident. Majchrowicz was in need of surgery to his injured knee.

Strom and Associates secured an award for Majchrowicz consisting of both past due and future medical expenses for the treatment of his knee. Majchrowicz has since has knee surgery and is rehabilitating his knee with the aid of workers’ compensation insurance, as he is receiving weekly compensation.
